Examples of in-text citations using APA Style.

A work by more than 6 authors, using a direct quotation:
Some of the items are “written in the positive direction and need to be key-reversed before totaling the scores” (Onwuegbuzie et al., 2004, p. 313).

Work by 1 author:
The construct that the LAS is designed to measure is library anxiety, which is the feeling of fear or uncertainty students experience when using the library (Mellon, 1986).

Citing a work by the same authors when there is another work by the same authors published in the same year:
Jiao and Onwuegbuzie (1999a) compared the results of the LAS with results from the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory (STAI), a measure that is used to determine anxiety levels.

There are a number of situational, environmental, and dispositional antecedents that influence library anxiety (Jiao & Onwuegbuzie, 1999b).

Multiple works within the same parentheses:
Librarians and libraries may use bibliometrics in many different ways. It can be used as a tool to build the collection (Johnson, 1996; Johnson, 1999; Sylvia, 1998; Yeoh & Kaur, 2008).

Items by the same author within the same parentheses:
Some researchers study groupings of journals (Tight, 2006; Tight, 2007; Tight 2008).

For more examples see pages 170-179 in the APA Manual.